Grasshopper, Frog, and Cricket love to run and play in the green meadow every day.

One day, Grasshopper's friends are not feeling well and decide to stay home. Grasshopper does not think it is a big deal. He runs outside to play anyway.

But the next day, Grasshopper's friends are not in the meadow. He looks everywhere for them, but they are nowhere to be found. So Grasshopper decides to fly home alone.

On the way, he sees Cricket spraying chemicals on plants that are being grown for food. There are containers of empty chemicals floating in the river nearby.

Grasshopper thinks about stopping to greet his friend. But he is still upset that Cricket did not come to play, so he flies on.

A few days later, Cricket stops by to see Grasshopper.

'Where have you been?' Grasshopper asks. 'Why haven't you come to the meadow to play?'

'Oh, I have a terrible stomachache and headache. I can barely walk,' Cricket moans.

Grasshopper is worried for his friend. 'You may have eaten something poisonous. Let's go to the doctor.'

Grasshopper helps his friend to walk. But when they come to the river, Cricket is too weak to fly across.

Grasshopper finds a stick to make into a bridge. Cricket begins to walk across but slips and falls!

'Help! I'm going to fall into the water!' he cries.

Grasshopper grabs hold of the stick to try and save Cricket.

'Hang on!' he shouts.

Cricket slips down the stick further. 'I can't hold on for long.'

Grasshopper encourages Cricket to be strong. 'Don't let go! There is something in the water below that might bite you.'

Suddenly, the branch breaks! Grasshopper and Cricket fall down into the water. A giant frog leaps up, ready to swallow them both.

Just in time, Grasshopper shouts, 'Stop, Frog! It is us, your friends!'

'Oh, I did not realize it was you! I have not been able to see well lately. What are you doing here?'

Grasshopper and Cricket crawl onto a nearby lily pad. 'We are going to the doctor. Cricket is very sick.'

'Maybe I should come too,'
Frog says. 'My eyes are bothering me, and my skin has a strange rash.'

Grasshopper thinks he knows what is going on. He decides it is time to speak up.

'Cricket, I am afraid the chemicals you sprayed on the plants are unhealthy for your food. And the containers that were dumped in the water have hurt Frog's eyes and skin.'

Cricket feels terrible for having caused so much trouble.

'It's OK, Cricket,' Frog says with a smile. 'We will make it right. But first let's get to the doctor so we will all feel better!'

Once he is healthy again, Cricket cleans up the garbage and waste from the water. He learns new ways to care for his plants that do not use harmful chemicals.
